A 17th century Inn with first class accommodation, food and drink

ABOUT THE BULL INN

The Bull Inn is a newly refurbished 17th century inn situated on Butcher Row in the centre of Shrewsbury, Shropshire.

Throughout its history this street has been at the centre of the butchers' trade in Shrewsbury. At one time it was known as the Flesh Shambles, then as Double Butcher Row before finally resting on its present name.

Up until the 19th century animals were still slaughtered in this street. Butchery must have been thirsty work as there were also six public houses in Butcher Row. Their names were The Tankerville Arms, The Lamb, The Rising Sun, The Cock and The Butchers Arms.

The Bull Inn is mentioned in St. Alkmunds parish church register as early as 1624. When the 'Bull' in Abbey Foregate closed in 1937 its sign, featuring the prize bull "Commandant" was hung at this very Bull Inn.

ACCOMMODATION

Our 6 bedrooms are first class standard. All are decorated in a traditional yet modern style and have a warm homely feel. Most of the rooms have en-suite facilities or private bathrooms and all are furnished with traditional features.

All rooms have colour TV and tea and coffee making facilities. A luxury four poster room is also available for those special occasions with requests such as champagne or flowers.

FOOD & DRINK

We provide a high standard of traditional pub classics, all homemade using fresh produce.

Food is served throughout the week from 12pm – 9pm.

We also provide a fine variety of real ales brewed from Marston's and other local breweries.
